FROM

To

B. Nagappa, Esq., Bar-at-Law.,
Secretary to Government,

SIR,

I am directed to state that under rule 60, printed at page 12 of the Manual of General Circulars and Standing Orders of Government Part I (1918), communications to --- Government should be signed by the Head of the office and not by an office Assistant. In the Chief Court inconvenience is felt occasionally in this respect, as the --- Registrar, owing to pressure of other urgent work, may not be readily available and consequently some delay occurs in the

the despatch of work. I am therefore to request that if Government have no objection, they may be pleased to permit the Deputy Registrar of the Chief Court, who is a Gazetted officer to sign all routine papers, reminders and statistical statements etc., forwarded to Government, important communications being signed by the Registrar as hitherto.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,
